The Pontifical Urbaniana University is an academic institution belonging to the Congregation for the Evangelisation of Peoples. The University provides for research and teaching within the framework of the Holy See's educational system regulated by the Congregation for Catholic Education. The origins of the Urbaniana date back to 1st August 1627, when Pope Urban VIII decided to establish the Urban College with the Bull Immortalis Dei Filius, which was the very first educational institution within the Congregation De Propaganda Fide.

The Institute was granted the faculty to confer the Bachelor degree by the Studium Urbis itself, at present the University La Sapienza. The Pontifical Urbaniana University was endowed with the title "Pontifical" with the Motu Proprio "Fidei Propagandae" of Blessed Pope John XXIII, on 1st October 1962, a few days before the beginning of the Second Vatican Council. For 300 years following its foundation, the seat of the Urban College was in the historical palace on Piazza di Spagna, where the Congregation for the Evangelisation of Peoples is at present. However, in 1926, during the Pontificate of Pope Pius XI, the Urban College moved to the Janiculum Hill, to a modest, old building that was later on replaced by the larger and more functional construction the University occupies today. The particular task of the Urban College "de Propaganda Fide" and later on of the Pontifical Urbaniana University was to prepare priests, religious men and women and lay people for the missions.

That is why the University has kept close links with and followed the institutional objectives of the Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples whose Cardinal Prefect is the Grand Chancellor of the University, the Supreme academic authority of the University.

In its earliest times the University only had the Faculties of Theology and Philosophy that could confer academic degrees. Afterwards the University Urbaniana particularly focused on the development of mission studies and other subjects that could serve the evangelizing action of the Church. To this purpose it established the first faculty of Missiology and later on, the Missionary Institute, established by a decree on the 1st September 1993, was granted the faculty to confer academic degrees in legal and missiological subjects. On the 25th of July 1986 the Institute was split into two Faculties: Canon Law and Missiology.

Since 1997 the University has started a complete renewal. Within the Faculty of Missiology, the Institute of Missionary Catechesis, established already in 1970, and the Spirituality Section merged into the Istituto Superiore di Catechesi e Spiritualità Missionaria "Redemptoris Missio, established by the Congregation for Catholic Education that approved its curriculum and statutes in 1999. In 1941, a language department was established mainly for the teaching of Oriental languages; later on a new section was added for the study of classical and modern languages as well. In 1975, the Centro Studi Cinesi was established along with the Centre of Studies and Research "Cardinal Newman" dedicated to the eminent former student of the University. In the year 2000, the Pontifical Urbaniana University, acknowledging the phenomenon of migration as one of the major challenges for the Church and civil society, resolved - in concert with the Scalabrini International Migration Institute (SIMI) - to establish specialization courses on Human Mobility within the Faculties of Philosophy, Theology and Missiology aimed at granting students a Master as well as the License and the Doctorate in Social Philosophy of Human Mobility. On the 20th April 2004, the SIMI was granted legal status and merged into the Faculty of Theology.

Research and teaching are accompanied by the publishing activity of the Urbaniana University Press (established in 1979), which presently publishes the periodicals Euntes Docete, the scholarly journal of the University and Redemptoris Missio, a publication by the ISCSM, the collections "Studia", monographs on the most topical philosophical and theological issues, "Subsidia", textbooks for the study of various subjects and others topics.
